Request of Samuel Gompers That Police Be Reinstated Is Refused.

COMPROMISE PLANS FAIL

Strikers Decide to Return at Request of Samuel Gompers, Head of the A. F. of L., But City Commissioner of Police Refuses to Allow Them.

By Associated Press.

BOSTON, Sept. 13.—It is a fight to the finish. The officers formerly held by striking policemen are vacant. New men will be recruited. The request of Samuel Gompers that the strikers be reinstated is refused.

This is the attitude of the state made known today by Police Commissioner Curtis. It appeared a means to the complete failure of the attempt at compromise.

Governor Coolidge promptly adopted the attitude of the commission. I too will be guided by the opinion of the attorney general, he said.

Attention now is turned to the position to be taken by the Boston firemen, electrical workers, telephone operators, car men and other organizations affiliated with the police union. A general strike has been threatened and if the threat is made good the most wide spread labor trouble ever experienced in New England is imminent.

Frank McCahey, New England organizer of the American Federation of Labor, announced last night that the police union had accepted the suggestion of Samuel Gompers that they return to work and await the outcome of the labor conference at the White House on October 6.

When Police Commissioner Curtis was informed of the action of the union he said that he had issued orders yesterday afternoon that no strike apply for reinstatement should be taken back. He said that he could not change this order before hearing from the former general. The commissioner refused to amplify this statement which was interpreted to mean that the attorney general would be asked to decide whether the strikers were employees who had a right to strike or officers of the government who had no such right.

WILL CLOSE PLANTS

In Case the Threatened Strike of Steel Workers Materializes Sept. 22.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 13.—The attitude of the independent steel manufacturers with respect to the threatened strike scheduled for September 22 is reflected in public announcements made by the officials of the West Penn and Allegheny Steel companies with plans at Brackenridge to the effect that they will close their plants down rather than permit outside interference with employees.

These plants employ 5,000 to 6,000 men. The claim is made that the only employees induced to join the organization are the foreign born unskilled laborers. American ones who constitute the bulk of the skilled labor class, are reported as indifferent to the efforts of the organizers.

On the other hand the officers in charge of the organization campaign claim to have enrolled almost 100 per cent of the steel and iron workers in the Pittsburgh district.

THEODORE BIXLER
PASSES AWAY THREE WEEKS AFTER BROTHER

Veteran of Civil War, He Spends Several Months in Libby Prison Pen.

Theodore Bixler, veteran of the Civil War and one of the leading citizens of the Morgan valley and a brother of City Clerk A. O. Bixler of Connelville, died last evening at his home at Morgan, three weeks following the death of a brother, David V. Bixler of Everson. Mr. Bixler had been ill for a long time and the end was not unexpected. Long before his brother died it seemed that he could survive but a few days.

Enlisting soon after he had passed his 15th birthday, in the Union army as a member of Company F, 11th Pennsylvania Reserves, Mr. Bixler served through the war, with the exception of short periods he was a prisoner and disabled by wounds. He entered the service June 20, 1861, and did not receive his final discharge until after the war, being mustered out in Washington June 28, 1866. Previously he had been honorably discharged, but almost immediately he had re-enlisted.

For three years, as a private in the 11th Reserves, under Colonel T. F. Gallagher and Captain Hayden, Mr. Bixler shared the fortunes of the regiment in many hard campaigns. He participated in the battle of Dranesville, May 20, 1862; the battle of Mechanicsville, June 26, and that of Gaines' Mill, June 27. At the last named place he was captured and sent to Libby prison and then to Belle Isle where he was held until August 6 of that summer when he was exchanged.

The close of August found him back on the front again. On August 30 he was engaged with his command in the second battle of Bull Run. He also took part in the battles of South Hill and Antietam in September and the morning of Fredericksburg in December. At Fredericksburg he was wounded, a bullet striking him in the chest. Here he was again captured.

That was the end of Private Bixler's fighting until the next July when he took part in the three-day battle at Gettysburg. He went through this unscathed. The following May Private Bixler was in the Wilderness campaign and at Spotsylvania and North Anna, Virginia. In June, 1864, he was honorably discharged.

The same month the young soldier re-enlisted in Company C, 190th Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry under Colonel William Hartshorne. Battles following that in which he had a part were Cold Harbor, Petersburg and Weldon railroad. At the last place a bullet struck him in the knee. The wound disabled him and he was sent north to Lincoln hospital, Hanfton, N. Y., and later to Annapolis, Md. That was the end of his active service.

After the war Mr. Bixler went West. In Missouri he met his wife, who was Miss Laura Carter. During his absence he visited a number of states, including Mississippi, where he was engaged for some time in a timber enterprise. Forty years or more ago he took up his residence in the Morgan valley where he had since lived. For a score of years he was employed by the H. C. Frick Coke company, in various capacities, being at one time yard boss at the White mine. Several years ago he was retired on a pension. His latest work was a supervisor of Upper Tyrone township.

Mr. Bixler is survived by his wife and the following children: Jesse, in Ohio; Sarah, wife of Joseph Heckman, Chicago Junction; Mrs. Stella Dunn, Latrobe; Mrs. Virginia McFarland, Mrs. Mancha Campbell and Mrs. Carrie Dudley, Wilkingsburg; Frank Bixler, New York; Ellsworth Bixler at home, and Mrs. Frances Frost, Dunbar. Two, David and Helen, are dead. There also survive a sister, Mrs. Marie Kane, Everson, and the brother in Connelville, A. O. Bixler.

The funeral service will be held Sunday at 2 o'clock at Hickory Square church. Interment will be in Cochran cemetery.

Mr. Bixler was a member of Col. Ellsworth Post of the G. A. R. at Scottsdale and the Union Veteran Legion. William F. Kurtz Post, Connelville, will have charge of the funeral. Burial will be with full honors of war.

LESSONS IN OPTOMETRY
By I. W. MYERS, Opt. D.
LESSON ONE.
What is Optometry?
Optometry is the science of measuring the various errors of vision, and applying the proper glasses for their correction.
Is Optometry growing in importance and scope?
Yes, it is fast assuming its proper position as an essential to human advancement.
Are the public as familiar with Optometry as they should be?
By no means. Optometry is far more important than the majority of people have any idea of.
Who is interested in Optometry?
Every person whose eyes are in an abnormal condition.
What percentage of people have abnormal vision?
Approximately 70 per cent.
Would these seven in ten people be better for securing the aid of an Optometrist?
Unquestionably, as their efficiency and enjoyment of life would be increased.

BOOST GOOD ROADS PROGRAM
American Automobile Association Will Seek to Help Development of Highways.

National, state and county highway development along sound economic lines will be emphasized in a greater degree than ever before by the American Automobile Association, announces George C. Diehl, chairman of its good roads board.

J. E. Pennsylvanian, chief of management of the federal bureau of public roads, and generally recognized as the foremost authority on good road management, has resigned his post to become director of roads for the association. Mr. Pennsylvanian originated and edited the "Good Roads Year Book" and was advisor to the joint committee on federal aid in past roads of the senate and house of representatives before taking charge of the management branch of the federal road bureau.

"The federal aid road act is a milestone on the way, but only a milestone," declared Mr. Diehl. "Ultimately there will come a national system of highways correlated with state systems and these in turn with country systems. There will be difficult problems of finance, of administration, and of traffic regulations to be solved. In these questions the six million motor-vehicle owners should take an active part, for these are questions that must be settled right and in accordance with intelligent public opinion. The A. A. A. good roads board will actively seek to sound the best sentiment on these subjects and to bring to light the best thought in their working out."

Watch the wires where they fasten to the lamps, as the motion of the car makes them sway and may cause a break or short circuit.

Lack of attention to the way the rear wheels are running is a source of subsequent financial loss to automobilists.

The total number of cars registered in all of the states during 1919 will probably be close to 4,500,000.

Outer Circumference around Inflated Tube 107"

Inner Circumference 85"

Difference 22"

Where are you going to get those extra 22 inches?

Any inner tube when inflated is radically longer around its outer circumference than around its inner circumference as is shown by the illustration above.

Recognizing this basic principle, Michelin Scientists have built this difference into the Michelin Tube by making it ring-shaped.

But every other tube is made perfectly straight—it's outer circumference being of practically the same length as the inner circumference. Since all tubes when in service must fill the inside of the casing, it is obvious that straight tubes must be stretched on the outer circumference or compressed next to the rim or both, whereas Michelin Tubes, being shaped to fit, are free from all strains of tension or compression.

DUNBAR REGRETS DECISION OF REV. H. L. HUMBERT NOT TO RETURN FOR ANOTHER YEAR

Special to The Courier.
DUNBAR, Sept. 12.—The decision of Rev. H. L. Humbert, who for the past six years has been the eminently successful pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church here, not to return for another year is a matter of deep regret, not only to his congregation but to the entire town. Coming to the church here when dissonance was apparent and the congregation found itself hard pressed to meet the demands for minister's salary and incidental expenses, he quietly assumed control and from that time a new spirit has prevailed and soon all obligations were discharged, improvements in the church and parsonage property were made and paid for and a fund was in the treasury from which the pastor's salary was promptly paid and the other church needs cared for. Harmony was the heritage of the congregation and teamwork prevailed among the members which were added to continually. Not an interest of the church was neglected and the congregation felt that they were enjoying a special degree of divine favor. This has become such a fixed rule that now to sever the relationship of the man whose faithful service made it possible is next thing to a calamity. Though never robust nor in ruddy health the amount of work Rev. Humbert was able to accomplish was simply amazing, and when war activities demanded service his powers to serve multiplied, and in every line day and night he did more than his bit displaying a tireless patriotic energy that would have done credit to a man of twice his strength. And in doing this duty as in all other activities he held the heart of the town. Recognized as one of the ablest ministers in the Pittsburgh conference he refused to consider better appointments, content to serve a congregation made up of common people in whose homes he was a ministering angel and in whose lives he was a moving force. And best of all, his life has always been in perfect accord with his profession. As a prominent citizen, not a member of his church, recently put it: "His sermons are exceptionally good, but his life among us is a better sermon than any he ever preached."

A party of young people from Dunbar and Pechin have returned from a most enjoyable camping trip spent as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Armstrong at Camp Moonlight, Boulder, W. V. The party never before knew so much enjoyment could be crowded into two weeks. Every day was filled with new delight. In addition to games of various sorts played on the land there was swimming, rowing and fishing—and such fishing. A catch of a string of fine fish a yard long was of daily occurrence, and on more than one occasion a 10-pound catfish was in the haul. No wonder they came back fresh and bristling after feasting for a fortnight on river riches. Another good thing the girls say is that they did not have to cook the fish, for Rev. Corcoran, one of the best fresh fish chefs in the state, did that for them and when they were called for breakfast just as the sun was peeping over the mountains, the aroma of nicely broiled fish and imported Java gave them such appetites as they had not experienced for a year. They will never forget Camp Moonlight, nor their genial host and hostess. The guests this year were Misses Peeri and Jessie Baker, Pearl Gillespie, Margaret Brown, Agnes White, Jennie Gillespie, Birdella Miller, Augusta Gillespie, all of this vicinity, and Jennie and Kate Paisley of Allison and Goldie Anderson, Uniontown, and Messrs. Robert Rankin, Edward Welker, Gerald Brown, B. C. Cence, Donald Armstrong and the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Armstrong.

Veteran C. W. Pyle and Miss Delilah Markley of Keffers are at Columbus, Ohio, this week attending the National Encampment of the G. A. R. They will probably be gone 10 days or two weeks. During their absence a brother veteran and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Miner of South Connelville, will occupy the Pyle mansion and see that the property is cared for. Mr. Miner, who was so unfortunate as to slip and sprain his ankle Tuesday, has since been confined to the house. He is improving, however, and expects to be about again next week.

Mrs. Sarah J. Holland and grand daughter, Ethel Prance, of Ferguson, were visiting relatives at Percy Sunday.

Ezekiel Cole of Continental No. 2 was visiting his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cole of Keffers, over Sunday. While there he and his aunt, Miss Daisy Cole, visited relatives at Monarch.

Wesley Sadie and Grace McClain of Uniontown have returned home after visiting their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Franks of Ferguson road for several days.

C. W. Pyle of Keffers and R. C. Hay of Tucker Run were jurors last week.

John Bell, who for a time delayed work on his new business block on Franklin avenue, has renewed activities and has the building up to the square. The structure is brick veneer and will make a decided improvement in that section of the town. It will consist of two good-sized storerooms and a dwelling overhead.

Miss Margaret Senor of Keffers is spending the winter at the home of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Donahoe of Wehring, Indiana county, and attending high school there. Miss Senor would have been a sophomore at the Dunbar township high school this year and will enter the same grade at Wehring.

Mrs. Sarah R. Herrington of Keffers and baby David A. Keffers, Jr. of Clairton, who is visiting here, were calling on Mrs. J. H. Williams of Fayette street Monday.

Ray G. Holsing, after spending his vacation at Atlantic City, is back again at his desk in the First National bank as cashier.

Miss Thelma Carr of Keffers has entered the Dunbar township high school as a member of the freshman class.

J. W. McClain of Keffers moved his family Wednesday to Cheat Haven, where he has secured a position in the mines. He is a practical miner. Having spent most of his life from boyhood in the coal mines of this vicinity. After making a number of improvements the McClain home will be occupied by D. A. Keffers of Clairton, who recently purchased it.

Miss Jane DeOre of Pechin is a student at Douglas Business college, Connelville.

The Dunbar township schools were given a holiday Thursday in order that the teachers and pupils might attend the Dawson fair.

The recent unusually heavy rains have seriously damaged the roads in this section, washing the surface off in many places. In other sections, especially the Ferguson road, the water has washed great gutters in the road. It will require considerable work to make this road weather the winter, and it is probable that as soon as the concrete work on the improved road is completed, about October 1, the township truck will be used in surfacing the Ferguson road between Pechin and Ferguson.

Mrs. Frances Weimer of Ferguson has completed her new home on the lots purchased in the plan on the Feather farm, and now occupies it. The building is of cottage style, and was built by Joseph Woolford of Mount Braddock.

Mrs. Lydia Twigg and family of Allison were visiting Mrs. Twigg's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Lehman of Keffers, Sunday.

County Superintendent J. S. Carroll of Connelville street is in Wharton township and other nearby sections looking after the schools this week, and the office work is being attended to by Assistant County Superintendent Miss Helen Carroll of Connelville, who undersees the work fully as well as her chief. Mr. Carroll is probably the busiest man in the county and is going in his auto from before sunrise until the close of the school week day, and then frequently driving his car home from distant points after that hour.

Mrs. Edna Scott of Railroad street was visiting Uniontown friends last Saturday.

J. B. Senor of Dunbar was a business caller here Thursday.

H. S. Osborne of Menallen township was transacting business here yesterday.

For Men Who Work Hard.
Factory workers, railroad men, farmers, miners, mill employees and all men who work at hard, straining physical labor are more or less subject to kidney trouble. Nature gives warning signals by frequent lameness, stiff joints, sore muscles, backache and rheumatic pains. J. G. Wolf, Green Bay, Wis., writes: "Foley Kidney Pills relieved me of a severe backache that had bothered me for several months. A few bottles fixed me up in good shape." Sold everywhere.—Adv.

Original Styles in Flapper Coats

These who originate styles for the flapper are destined to come in for many thanks from that opinionated young person when she views the new winter coats designed for her. Since specialists give their time and thought to her needs styles for her frocks and coats and millinery are no longer afterthoughts of those whose business is to design apparel for grown-ups. Of course when the girl from twelve to seventeen owns a frock or coat that takes its cue from styles worn by grown-ups her happiness is complete. Here is a coat which has the long shoulder and graceful drape that rules in the new fall coats for women. It is made of velours and is less full than the coats whose style it follows. But the arrangement of drape about the sleeves gives it an ample look and makes it roomy, and these things are the mode for winter coats. At the back this coat suggests a skirt set onto a bodice and this effect is emphasized by a row of covered buttons down the center of the body. It is odd and pretty and girlish.

A small sailor collar, with three plaits at each side, sets an example which the sleeves follow by adopting three plaits for their decoration. Covered buttons, like those on the back of the coat, finish up the sleeve trimming. The coat falls to the calf of the leg and hangs straight at the front. Altogether it is as pretty as any model so far brought out for the coming winter—and this is saying a great deal to its credit. It is a convincing example of the advantages that come from expert designing. Girls from twelve to sixteen need the sort of service that specialists can give them and are giving them, with more and more success, until we have ceased to call these years "the awkward age."

Just What She Needed.

"I don't know of Chamberlain's Tablets some time ago and they proved to be just what I needed," writes Mrs. Volva Rankin, Chickadee, Mo. "There not only relieved me of indigestion but toned up my liver and rid me of backache and dizziness that I had been subject to for some time. They did me a world of good and I will always regard a good word for them."

Big Lot of Hay Fever Jokes

But Kentucky Man Says—"People Who Belong to Hay Fever Colony are Kidding Themselves."

Wouldn't Be Any Rose or Hay Fever if Simple Home Remedy Was Given a Chance.

"Yes, there's a real NINETY-NINE per cent effective remedy for hay or rose fever," Dr. Frank J. Druggist in a prosperous Kentucky city. "But I don't expect anyone to believe me, because the treatment is so easy and the cost not worth mentioning."

"The annual crop of hay-fever jokes would be mighty scarce if people would get a ounce of Monotholized Arcline and by just adding water that has been boiled make a pint of liquid that will cure a real hay fever to all who suffer."

"Many of my hay-fever friends tell me that by starting to gargle and snuff or spray the nostrils a few times a day the expected severe attack often fails to appear and in cases where it does show up is very mild and does not annoy."

"The Better Class of Pharmacists" who dispense Monotholized Arcline say it will greatly modify any attack even when taken three or four days after hostilities begin.

HISTORIC PLACES ABOUT WASHINGTON

MANY RESIDENTS OF CAPITAL CITY HAVE NEGLECTED TO VISIT THEM.

BLADENSBURG IS CLOSE BY

Some of Miller's Defeat by Invading British and Famous Daring Ground
—Fort Stevens, Braddock's Stone
and Arlington Are Interesting.

By EDWARD B. CLARK.
Washington. — Some residents of Washington do not know Washington or its environs. Scores of temporary residents here also do not know Washington and its environs. It is left for the casual visitor, the sightseer, to learn of this town and all that it and its neighborhood hold of historic interest.

What is it that gets into the legislators, newspaper correspondents and others who come here for several years' stay which makes them put off visiting the places which should be of deep interest to all Americans? It is easy enough to answer. Every man who comes here of course has made up his mind in advance that he will visit all the places which events have made interesting, but he puts off from day to day and from day to day, and finally when he is called away from this city to other duties he usually puts the last week into one of quick sightseeing.

It is a safe wager that there are many senators and representatives now sitting under the dome of the capitol who never have visited Mount Vernon, the residence and the place of burial of George Washington. There is one newspaper correspondent of whom I know, and shame keeps me from giving his name, who was in Washington for seven years before he took the trail of natural American reverence to the tomb of the "First in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

Washington has hundreds of visitors
at all seasons, people who have come here to see the places of interest, and who, in advance have prepared lists of the things which they feel that they must see. These visitors do the thing as thoroughly as it can be done within the time which they allow for their stay. There are men and women, and even children, living in distant parts of the country who know more about Washington than do some of its residents, temporary and permanent.

Bladensburg is historic.
Close to the city of Washington
there is a place called Bladensburg.
In many stories of the political and warlike events in which the city of Washington figures, Bladensburg looms large. It was there that the unorganized militia of the United States was met and overrun by the British troops in their advance on Washington, at the time they captured the city and burned the capitol and the White House.

Bladensburg is a historic place for other reasons. It was a great fueling ground in the old days when men were bent on settling disputes on what they called the field of honor. It was to Bladensburg that Stephen Decatur went in the gray of the morning one hundred years ago to meet in personal combat Commodore Barron of the United States navy. On the field of Bladensburg the great sailor, Stephen Decatur, fell mortally wounded by a bullet from his adversary's weapon. The Decatur house, built and occupied by the sailor, still stands in the city of Washington.

Out Seventh street, far and well
within the city are the remains of Fort Stevens. When the Confederate general, Earl, threatened the city from the northeast, troops were hurriedly brought to the city and Fort Stevens was manned. After a smart skirmish the Confederates were driven off. Abraham Lincoln, then president of the United States, went out to Fort Stevens to witness the fight. He stood exposed for some time to the Confederate fire.
Fort Stevens and its historic interest seem nearly forgotten today, except by the men and women who come here
from a distance to see Washington.

Where Braddock Landed.
Probably not many persons in Washington, lawmakers, office holders, or residents, know that General Braddock landed his forces from barges on the Potomac at a point well within the present limits of the city, and from there marched on his unfortunate campaign into western Pennsylvania, accompanied by the young survivor soldier, George Washington. The place where Braddock landed is known as Braddock's Rock, and its location is well defined on the maps and in the histories.

Arlington, the home of the Custises and later of Robert E. Lee, is now a great national cemetery. Arlington to be sure, is in Virginia, but it is within ten minutes' ride of the city of Washington. The view down the Potomac from Washington is unsurpassed for beauty. Thousands upon thousands of the nation's dead lie buried under the great trees. The old colonial man-

MANAGER HUGGINS DOES NOT REALIZE WORTH OF POPULARITY AND PUBLICITY

Hard-Working Leader of New York Yankees.

There is no keener student in baseball than Miller Huggins, manager of the New York American league team. He constantly is thinking out plays, and tries to implant his ideas on the men he commands. He is a clever judge of pitchers, and though he always played the infield, he can teach a young pitcher more than the average retired star moundman.

Not Popular With Fans.
Despite his success here, it nevertheless is true that Huggins has not won a great deal of popularity in New York, complains a New York critic. He has won many acknowledgments of his ability, but the fans do not feel for him like they do for McGraw or like they did for some of his numerous predecessors, particularly Clark Griffith and Bill Donovan.

Huggins largely is to blame for the fact that he has not won more popularity in New York. He discounts both popularity and publicity. Despite the fact that he is one of the smartest men that ever trod on a ball field, and is a lawyer in the bargain, he does not seem to realize what assets popularity and publicity can be to a successful manager.

Lets Huston Do Mixing.
He is willing to let the congenial "Cap" Huston do all the mixing for the club. There perhaps never was a club in which there was greater intimacy between the owners and baseball writers than there is between Ruppert and Huston and the New York Chapter of Baseball Writers, yet on the other hand, few managers are as distant from the men who write of the exploits of their team as Huggins.

sion of the Custises and the Lees still stands. In it Robert E. Lee was married to Miss Custis and it was there, in later years, that he decided to cast
his lot with the Confederacy. Arlington is more or less neglected by the temporary and permanent residents of the city of Washington, but the visitors from a distance go to the beautiful place in thousands at all seasons.

PITCHER IS TRADED FOR BASEBALL BAT

Josh Devore Swaps Most Erratic
Southpaw in Captivity.

Bill Fisher, Outfielder With Joe Tinker's
Columbus Team, Tells How He Lost His Pet Bat—Broken
on First Ball Pitched.

Roger Bresnahan and Joe Cantillon
once figured in a deal which involved a bird dog and a ball player, but here's how Bill Fisher, now an outfielder with Columbus, says he lost a good bat in his Ohio State days:

"I was playing with the Charleston team and hitting the ball hard. I had just gotten a new bat—a Miller Huggins
model—and I swore by it," says Fisher.

"I looked upon that bat as the one and only magic wand." Well, sir, Josh Devore, manager of the Chillicothe team, had the world's most erratic southpaw in captivity. "That fellow was so wild it wasn't safe to be in the same park with him," John came over to our dugout one day and said,
casual like to our chief: "What'll you give me for that sterling left-hander over there?"

"Taken unawares, the chief says:
"Oh, I'll give a bat," and "Done," says
Josh before the chief could realize what had happened. "You'll give me
the pick of the bats, won't you?" asked Josh, and of course the chief says he would, and I'm a dirty hound if he didn't go and pick my bat.

"Of course the club had paid for the bat and I couldn't say much, but I thought enough to put me in the pen-tentary, but before the game was three innings old I had a great joy.
The first time Harry Devore, Josh's brother, came up he had my bat, and would you believe it, he broke it right half in two on the first ball pitched.
But at that we got stung on the deal.
That southpaw's head was just a parking place for his bat."

If anyone tells you Wilson Fawcett isn't as good an outfielder as the Yanks have had in five years, go to the mat with him. And he can hit!

SIX RACES ON THE FINAL FAIR PROGRAM FURNISH EXCITEMENT

Two Fines Imposed on Driver Collins
For Not Driving to Win.

Instead of the five that had been announced, six races were put on the final afternoon yesterday of the Dawson race meet. The last was not concluded until the shades of night were falling. It was 7:30 o'clock when Weary Willie dashed over the wire with a slight lead over Silent Anne in the 2:20 pace.

In spite of the rain the day before the track was in good condition and the races were exciting. The first of the afternoon, the 2:15 pace, went six heats to decide the winner. Only two races were won in straight heats.

The opening event, the 2:15 pace, was won by Ruth Muscovite, owned by S. R. Sipe, Johnstown. The second, the 2:25 trot, was taken by Princess Bingen in straight heats and the third the 2:17 trot, by Sib Bengon, owned by J. R. Crawford, Rockville, Md., in four heats.

Kirby Direct, owned by J. W. Clark, Clinton, N. C., won the 2:12 pace. The 2:14 trot was taken by Helen Stiles.
Only three horses were entered in this and one withdrew after the first heat.

The fourth event, the 2:20 pace, was the exciting one. The first heat was won by Lewis Witt, who never had a look in afterwards. Judge Joseph McGraw and Starting Judge Roddy Biers ordered Crawford, driver of Silent Anne, to race his mare. He did and won the second heat. The third heat was taken by Weary Willie, with Collins up, in 2:17 3/4, several seconds faster than either previous heat. The judges placed a fine of $25 on Collins
for "laying up" in the first two heats.
In the fourth heat, Collins finished third to Crawford's first. The judges evidently thought Weary Willie's driver was "laying up" again, and at the beginning of the fifth heat they ordered him off the rig and put C. R.
Moorehead of Indiana, Pa., up behind, with orders to drive to win. Moorehead did that very thing. Weary Willie won the fifth heat easily, but in the last when Silent Anne was his only competitor, he had the tussle of his life. The two horses came under the wire so close together that many speculators who had stuck to the finish were uncertain which had won until the judge made his announcement.
Thereupon, the judges assessed another $50 fine on Collins for not driving to win and awarded Moorehead
$50 for driving the gelding.

The Devil's Own

A Romance of the Black Hawk War

By Randall Parrish

Author of "Contraband," "Shoes of the Irish Brigade," "When Wilderness was King," etc.

Illustrated by Edwin Meyer

The knowledge that the steamer which had passed us was heavily laden with troops was most encouraging. In itself alone this was abundant proof of the safe delivery of my dispatches, and I was thus relieved to realize that the duty had been performed. There might be wonder and later the necessity of explanation, yet no one would suffer from my absence, and I was within the limits of my fur-lough—the reinforcements for Forts Armstrong and Crawford were already on their way. So, altogether, I faced the task of eluding Kirby with a lighter heart and renewed confidence. Alone, as I believed him to be, and in that new country or the very verge of civilization, he was hardly an antagonist I needed greatly to fear. Indeed, as man to man, I rather welcomed an encounter.

There is little to record, either of the day or night. The latter shut down dark but rainless, although the sky was heavily overcast by clouds. Sam made no endeavor to speed his engine, keeping most of the way close to the deeper shadow of the shore, and the machinery ran smoothly, its noise indistinguishable at any distance. Day had not broken when we came to the mouth of the Illinois and turned our bow cautiously up that stream, becoming immediately aware that we had entered new waters. The negro, ignorant of what was before us, soon beached the boat on a sand bar, and we decided it would be better for us to remain there until dawn. This was not long in coming, the gray sky of the east slowly lighting up the scene and bringing into view, little by little, our immediate surroundings. Nowhere appeared the slightest evidence of life, either on water or land; all was forlorn and dead, a vista of utter desolation. Sam was standing up, his whole attention concentrated on the view upstream.

"Do steamers ever go up this river?" I asked, surprised at the volume of water.

He glanced around at me as though startled at my voice.

"Yes, sah; putty near eay sorter boat kin. Trouble is, sah, we's got started in de wrong place—dar's plenty wahk 'oher side of dis yars bar."

"Who told you the best way to find Shunk?"

His eyes widened and searched my face, evidently still somewhat suspicious of any white man.

"A nigger down St. Louis way, sah. Day done cotched him an' brought him back afore he even got ter Beardstown."

"And you believe he can guide us there?"

"Ah sure can, if whot dat nigger sed was correct, sah. Ah done questioned him mighty particlar, an' Ah members ebery sign whot he giv' me."

He grinned broadly. "Ah sorter suspicious Ah mought need cat information."

"All right, then; it is certainly light enough now—let's push off."

We had taken the sand lightly and were able to pole the boat into deep water with no great difficulty. The broader river behind us remained veiled in mist, but the gray light was sufficient for our purpose, enabling us to proceed slowly until our craft had rounded the protruding headland, out of sight from below.

"Taint' so awful fur from yere, sah," Sam called to me.

"What—the place where we are to land?"

"Yes, sah. It's de mouth ob a little creek whot yer nebber see till yer right plain at it. Betrah keep yer eyes open 'long dat shore, sah."

The girl, alertly bent forward, was first among us to detect the concealed opening, which was almost completely screened by the overhanging trees, her voice ringing excitedly as she pointed it out. Sam was quick to respond, and almost before I had definitely established the spot, the bow of the boat swerved and we shot in through the leafy screen, the low-hung branches sweeping against our faces and scraping along the sides. It looked a veritable cave, and indeed all I remember noting in my first hasty glance through the shadows was the outline of a small boat moored to a fallen tree. I scrambled over, found precarious footing, and made fast.

"So this is the place?" I questioned incredulously, staring about at the dark, silent forest, which still remained in the deep night shade. "Why, there's nothing here."

"No, sah; dar certainly don't 'pear ter be much," and the negro crept out of the cockpit and joined me, "cep'tin' dat boat. Dar ain't no boat 'round yere, les' folks hes bin a-ridin' in it, Ah reckon."

Sam advanced cautiously and began anxiously to scan the ground beating back and forth through the underbrush. After watching him a moment my gaze settled on the strange boat, and I crept along the log, curious to examine it more closely. It had the appearance of being newly built, the paint unscratched, and exhibiting few marks of usage. A single pair of oars lay crossed in the bottom, and beside these was an old coat and some ordinary fishing tackle—but nothing to arouse any interest. Without doubt it belonged to Amos Shunk, and had been left here after the return from some excursion either up or down the river. I was still staring at these things and speculating about them when the negro called out from a distance that he had found the path. Rene covered his hall, standing up in the boat, and I hastened back to help her ashore.

We had scarcely exchanged words during the entire night, but now she accepted my proffered hand gladly, and with a smile, springing lightly from the deck to the luscious footing of the log.

"Good Lord o' mercy!" he exclaimed excitedly, "what's dat?"

I was close beside him by this time and saw the thing also—the body of a man lying on the ground.

"Wait where you are, Rene," I exclaimed, waving her back. "There is a man lying here beyond the log. Come, Sam; we will see what he looks like."

He was slow in following hanging back as I approached closer to the motionless form, and I could hear the muttering of his lips. Unquestionably the man was dead; for this I was assured before I even knelt beside him. He lay on his face in a litter of dead leaves, and almost the first thing I noticed was the death wound back of his ear, where a large-caliber bullet had pierced the brain. His exposed hands proved him a negro, and it was with a feeling of unusual repugnance that I touched his body, turning it over sufficiently to see the face. All at once I knew him, unable wholly to repress a cry of startled surprise as I stared down into the upturned face—the dead man evidently murdered about treacherously from behind, was Rene. I sprang to my feet, gazing about blindly into the dim woods, my mind for the instant dazed by the importance of this discovery. What could it mean? How could it have happened? By what means had he reached this spot in advance of us, and at whose hand had he fallen? He could have been there only for one purpose, surely—in an attempt to guide Eloise Beaucourt and the quadroon Della. Then what had become of the women? Where were they now?

I stumbled backward to the support of the log, unable to answer any one of these questions, remembering only in that moment that I must tell Rene the truth.

"The way before us looks scarcely better," I answered, vainly endeavoring to locate Sam. "Friend Shunk evidently is not eager for callers. Where is that fellow?"

"Somewhere over in that thicket, I think. At least his voice sounded from there. You discovered nothing in the boat?"

"Only a rag and some fishing tackle. Come; we'll have to plunge in somewhere."

She followed closely as I pushed a passage through the obstructing underbrush, finally locating Sam at the edge of a small opening, where the light was sufficiently strong to enable us to distinguish marks of a little-used trail leading along the bottom of a shallow gully bisecting the sidehill.

At the crossing of a small stream we noticed the imprint of several feet in the soft mud of the shore. One plainly enough was small and narrow, beyond all question that of a woman, but the others were all men's, one being clad in moccasins. Sam, still ahead, started to clamber across the trunk of a fallen tree, but came to a sudden halt.

dimly revealed figure in the leaves. "Free Pete, Carlton's Pete? How—could he have got here? Then—then the others must have been with him. What has become of them?"

"It is all mystery; the only way to solve it is for us to go on. It can do no one any good to stand here, staring at this dead body. When we reach the cabin we may learn what has occurred. Go on ahead, Sam, and we will follow—don't be afraid, boy; it is not the dead who hurt us."

She clung tightly to me, shrinking past the motionless figure. She was which had literally crushed in one side of his head, but his dead hands yet gripped a rifle, as though he had fallen fighting to the last.

The other man, the one lying across the threshold, had been shot, although I did not ascertain this fact until after I turned the body over sufficiently to reveal the face. This was disfigured by the wound and covered with blood, so that the features could scarcely be seen, yet I instantly recognized the fellow—Carver. Surprised out of all control by this unexpected discovery, I steadied myself against the log wall, fully aroused to the sinister meaning of his presence. To a degree the complete significance of this tragedy instantly gripped my mind. If this fellow Carver had been one of the assassins then it was absolutely certain that Kirby must also have been present—the leader of the attack. This inevitably meant that both men had been aboard the steamer, and later were put ashore at the mouth of the Illinois. And now that I thought about it, why not? It was no accident, and I wondered that the possibility had never occurred to me before. The gambler naturally knew all the gossip of the river, and beyond question he would be aware of the reported existence of this underground station for runaway slaves. It was common talk as far down as St. Louis, and his mind would instantly revert to the possibility that the fleeing Rene might seek escape through the assistance of Shunk. The mysterious vanishing of the boat would serve to increase that suspicion. Even if this had not occurred to him at first, the steamer would have brought news that no keel-boat had been seen on the lower river, while the captain of the John R. Glover, or someone else on board, would have been sure to have mentioned the negro helper and suggested that he might have had a hand in the affair. To follow that trail was, indeed, the most natural thing for Kirby to do. He had not overtaken Rene because he was not yet there, but he had unexpectedly come upon the other fugitives, and even though the encounter had cost the life of his henchman, Carver, it also resulted in the death of two men who had come between him and his prey—the negro and the abolitionist. The scene cleared in my brain and became vivid and real. I could almost picture in detail each act of the grim tragedy. The two revengeful trackers—if there were only two engaged, for others might have been recruited on the steamer—must have crept up to the hut in the night or early morning. Possibly Kirby had learned of some other means of approach from the big river. Anyway the fact that Shunk had been trapped within the cabin would indicate the final attack was a surprise. The negro might have been asleep outside and met his death in an attempt at escape, but the old white man, finding flight impossible, had fought desperately to the last and had killed one antagonist before receiving his death blow. This was all plain enough, but what had become of Kirby, of the two women—Eloise and the quadroon mother?

Uncertain what to do or how to act, I could only turn to the waiting girl and the negro to tell them what I had found.

They listened as though scarcely comprehending. Sam uttered little moans of horror, and appearing helpless from fright, but Rene quiet, merely exhibiting her emotion in the whiteness of her face and quickened breathing. Her eyes, wide open, questioning, seemed to sense my uncertainty. As I ended the tale and concluded with my theory as to what had occurred following the deed of blood, her quick mind asserted itself.

"But this must have happened very lately; the fire still smoldered, you said. When do you think that steamer could have landed here?"

"Why, perhaps early last evening." "And it has not occurred to you that the boat might have waited here while the man Kirby went ashore?"

"No; that could scarcely be true. If the steamer was transporting troops; what was it you were thinking about?"

CHAPTER IX.

The Trail of the Raiders.

Shocked and unmanned as I was at this discovery, to pause there staring at those gruesome figures would have brought fresh alarm to the two watching, my every movement from the edge of the clearing. Clipping my nerves, I advanced over the first body, watching for any sign of the presence of life within the cabin. There was none—the work of the murder had been completed, and the perpetrators had fled. The dead man, with ghastly countenance upturned to the roof rafters, and the snowy beard, was undoubtedly the negro helper, Amos Shunk. Pete's description of the appearance of the man left this identification beyond all dispute. He had been stricken down by a savage blow,

MUCH INTEREST NOW CENTERED IN NEW RAINEY-WOOD PLANT

By-Product Installation at Swedeland, Pa., Unique
in a Way.

FIRST JOINT OPERATION

In Which Owner and Operator of Connectingville Coking Coal Becomes Associated With Former Consumer of Beckhoe Coke; Shows the Trend.

Interest in the Connelville coke region centers more in the near approach of the completion of the by-product plant of the Rainey-Wood Coke company at Swedeland, Pa., than in any other plant of this character that has been constructed. This is not because of the size or extraordinary character or up-to-date-ness of the installation, but because of the relation the Connelville region sustains to the operation.

Heretofore by-product installations, both merchant and furnace, have been built by interests outside of the Connelville region, or by interests already owning and operating beetling plants in the region, directly or through the medium of a subsidiary corporation. In the case of the Rainey-Wood plant the relation sustained to the Connelville region is wholly different, and altogether a new one in the annals of by-product coking development.

The plant is being constructed and will be owned and operated by a corporation—the first of its kind—which represents, on one hand, an owner of Connelville coking coal and operator of beetling ovens, and on the other hand an interest which heretofore has been a consumer of Connelville beetling coke. The union has been effected by the creation of the Rainey-Wood Coke company, representing the W. J. Rainey interests, and the Alan Wood Iron & Steel company. It is because the enterprise is the pioneer in such a combination of interests that the Connelville region is somewhat more concerned in its progress than in any that have preceded it, particularly as to the possibilities that may lie with an extension of the plant to include other interests in a like amalgamation as one of the developments of the changing conditions in the coking industry.

The Swedeland plant, which is to consist of 110 Koppers ovens, of a capacity of 11.7 tons each, is being constructed in two batteries of 55 ovens each, complete with by-product recovery apparatus. The plant will have a capacity for carbonizing approximately 1,500 tons of coal per day, or about 55,000 tons per month.

The plans of the owners are to make this plant a commercial coking operation, disposing of the furnace and foundry grades of coke throughout the territory adjacent to its location. The Alan Wood Iron & Steel company will use about one-third of the plant's output at its furnaces; the remainder of their requirements will be supplied by the W. J. Rainey interests from the Connelville region, which will also supply the raw coal for the manufacture of by-product coke. Provision, financial and otherwise, has been made for an ultimate extension of this plant to a total of 230 ovens. When that capacity has been attained the plant will be enabled to take care of a large part of the coke requirements of both furnaces and foundries in the Lehigh and Schuylkill valleys.

That the plant will also have the character of a merchant operation will have additional interest to Connelville region producers in that its entrance into the general coke trade will have the effect of curtailing the beetling coke market to the extent represented by the by-product tonnage the new plant may place outside of its own associated consuming interests. This will not be regarded as alarming, but it is significant of the trend in the industry which for some time past has been evidenced by the gradual transformation of the Connelville region from a coke manufacturing to a coal producing center.

Newspaper Offices Mobbed.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Offices of La Prensa and El Comercio, newspapers of Lima, Peru, were attacked by a mob yesterday and partly burned, according to today's advices to the Peruvian embassy. The home of Mito Quesada, proprietor of El Comercio, was totally destroyed by fire. The disorder followed a mass meeting of protest against assassinations who had plotted to attack President Le Gait after the government had ordered the imprisonment of several of the conspirators.

JUMPS FROM ROOF

Little Colored Girl Plunges Off Top of Porch; Not Hurt.

Mattie Hart, three years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Hart, colored, of South 11th street, West Side, had a narrow escape from serious injury a few days ago when she jumped from the roof of a porch to the ground below, a distance of 12 feet. She was not injured and after getting up she started to play.

The child's mother sent her upstairs to take a nap and when the wind blew the door of the bedroom shut she became frightened. Removing the screen from the window she crawled out onto the roof of the porch, jumping from it.

THE PARAMOUNT.

"HIGH POCKETS"—In which Louis Brennan the western cowboy star is seen in the leading role, is an interesting attraction today. The opening of her story shows the finding of a man's body by the federal marshal. "High Pockets" Henderson. Who the man is or why he was murdered are the problems which "High Pockets" is called upon to solve. He soon learns that the man is a rancher from the east, and later discovers a reason for the murder when he comes upon a gang of cattle thieves in the act of rebranding the murdered man's cattle. Out on the ranch, the dead man's sister is trying to run the ranch alone, waiting for the coming of some one to take the place of her brother. However, "High Pockets" induces her to come to town and take a position in the general store, where he will be able to watch over her and prevent any evil action on the part of the gang.

When all chance of proving the guilt of the men whom "High Pockets" suspects seems slim, the murdered man's twin brother arrives in town, and adds a new twist to the involved case. His coming is prophetic, for "High Pockets" sends the brother to the gang's hangout and watches as they cry out at the appearance of the "ghost" and begin to accuse each other of her murder. At last the mystery is close to solution; and shortly thereafter the culprits meet their just deserts.

LINGERIE—SWEATERS—BLOUSES

Friday and Saturday Only

Beautiful, Durable and Practical Wash Satin and Crepe de Chine

"When someone discovered that crepe de chine washed like cotton flannel and wore like iron and made it into lingerie, that Solomon of the sewing machine promptly turned his designers to making the lustrous silk into underwear and solved the problem of hundreds of women whose hours of employment made the care of their clothing a problem.

Of course, there are still many exquisite silken undergarments combined with Georgette, ribbon and chiffon, embroidered and trimmed with fine laces which will not stand the rough and tumble wear of every day life, but there is also, an even higher class of the garments, even though they may not be higher priced, which are equally desirable and far more practical. They have trimmings of hemstitching or of self colored embroidery and their value is in the quality of the material rather than in the beauty of the lace and ribbon.

"It's a shame to let these garments go at this reduction," said the head of the department to the ad writer. "We can't duplicate them now at the price we are selling them," and he laid a handsome gown in the box regretfully.

And He Told the Truth—

These are wonderful bargains in the truest sense of the word, for they offer right now at one-fifth off regular price dainty lingerie which most women consider a luxury, at a price which most can afford.

Ponder This

WHEN CONSIDERING THE PURCHASE of his winter wardrobe it is time for the average good citizen, conservative and just, to stop and consider the reasons for the present condition of the market in men's clothing this year. Sheep's wool was never higher. Skilled labor never cost so much. Linings, trimmings, hair cloth, padding and everything else which enters into the making of a suit of clothes or other garments never cost more as raw material and never cost half as much for its manufacture.

AS A RESULT, the many who buy clothes this fall must face two facts.

They must either pay the price of increased cost of material and labor and be WELL DRESSED, or they must be satisfied with a suit bought at old prices but not in the least comparable with the suit that price used to buy.

The test of the bargain will come in the serviceability of the clothes and the wise man will shun the cheap clothes this year as he will shun oil schemes and failed gold mine stock.

SPEAKING STRICTLY FOR OURSELVES and in guidance to our customers, we go on record as saying that the Wright-Metzler Company will continue to be the Home of Quality and Value and that neither now nor in the future in or will there be danger of its deserting those standards of workmanship and workmanship upon which it has based its claim for public confidence and which it expects to uphold.
